Los Angeles, Nov. 1.—Held to trial in Superior Court on charge of mail conspiracy, Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, held expectant of the trial, square-jawed, her mother, Mrs. Mary Anne Kennedy, and Mrs. Estesia Williamson Shultz, with whom she has resided for 2 years, were in court to see the trial.

Daily Proverb: "Stinkers will spoil the happiness of an emperor as well as mine."

We're beginning to suspect that what protects Mussolini is his nerve.

The day after each election we are reminded that but few newspaper moguls have not sustained their majority.

Mr. Volstead expressed the belief that there has been a big decrease in the supply of liquor. Sure! But think of the volume of poison substituted!

We'll say this for Almee: If she really wrote the love letter credited to her she hasn't outlived her longing for romance.

A Stockholm cable says Princess Astrid will bake her own bride's cake. Happily for young Leopold, the bride's cake is always given away.

It is safe to say that these repeated complaints about elections are not predicated on any extravagance manifested in purchasing the pencils in the booths.

Candidate Mills should have known better than to try to scare New York City into voting for him by exposing her milk supply. The Labies couldn't vote.

Gene Tunney says he's resolved to give up fighting in the event that he marries. It's a good resolution, even though it can't be kept.

With the holiday but three weeks away, dealers are a trifle slow with their annual announcement that Thanksgiving turkeys will be high owing to their great scarcity due to a bad racing season.

It's worth noting that Senator Jim Reed didn't start musing things up in senatorial circles till after he had decided to quit his job.

What surprises us is that Mr. Mussolini, ever cool and collected, has never thought of telling any of his would-be acolytes to go and get a reputation as a "shoeshine" before experimenting on him.

Three thousand words are said to have been add'd to our language by radio. Come to think of it, about all the fellows with radio's we know are forever flossing with 'em, but we never imagined anybody was reading our thoughts.

A handwriting expert in the Almee McPherson case says any code can be deciphered. Some time we're going to put one over on the experts by sending 'em a letter in our own natural hand.

In the light of the tendency to shower her with gifts characteristic of the little she visits, it may be just as well that this very heart of the garden spot of the world isn't on Queen Marie's itinerary. Think how she would feel juggling a steam shovel about with her.

An exchange says the nation has been watching Ohio that it may interpret the decision of her voters. With a Democratic governor re-elected by a comfortable plurality and a Republican senator returned by a plurality over five times as large, it strikes us that the nation is going to have its troubles when it begins its interpreting stint.

Honors Very Much Divided.

As a local citizen remarked, Wednesday, the election of Tuesday was one which gave just about everybody, the defeated candidates excepted, a chance to celebrate.

In the state, Democracy elected its candidate for governor and, probably, Lieutenant governor, while the Republicans elected their candidate for United States senator and their candidates for all but one of the lesser state offices. In our congressional and appellate court districts both the unsuccessful candidates are Democrats, and when it came to the judicial ticket for county and city, Democracy again carried off the honors. The Republicans elected their district state senatorial candidate and their county candidate for the state legislature, and all the county offices save one, one of which went to Democracy by default. So it may be said that, insofar as the Marion situation is concerned, honors are very much divided, with ground for congratulation on the part of both the old party dividers.

However, it will not do to pass over the results of Tuesday's election without making special mention of the fine showing made by Brooks Fletcher, Democratic candidate for congress to succeed himself, and Charles L. Justice, the successful candidate in this district for appellate judge. The majority rolled up by Congressman Fletcher surprised his political friends and foes alike, while the majority of Judge Justice was simply amazing. His vote of close to 7,000 in the county in excess of that of his opponent being almost incomprehensible.

It would be hard indeed to imagine much greater tributes which could be offered by the voters of the respective districts in which they made their race than those paid to Judge Justice and Congressman Fletcher. Such tributes attest a degree of popularity seldom attained throughout political districts.

Chances Somewhat Dimmed.

While it can not be told that the showing made by former Senator Atlee Pomerene in Tuesday's election or that made by Governor Victor Donahue improved the chances of either for selection by the national Democratic presidential timber, it is not impossible that one or both may be given consideration when Admittedly had the former senator achieved a victory over his Republican opponent, Donahue could hardly have overlooked him as a promising contender for the presidential nomination. And it is equally certain that had Governor Donahue been reelected to succeed himself for the second time by the great majority his friends anticipated, he would undoubtedly have been considered as a possibility for the highest honor at the gift of his party. However, when Democratic leaders in each judgment analyze the situation and realize, as they must, that the influences of state employees and their families behind the governor probably delivered to him a vote ten times the size of his majority over Mr. Cooper, his chances as presidential possibility may be somewhat dimmed.

On the other hand, the Democracy of the nation, which is bound to become conversant with the situation in Ohio, if it is not now, may take into account the peculiar conditions which obtained in the Ohio senatorial race this year. There can be no question but what three factors contributed chiefly to the selection of Senator Willis which may not be in evidence in the presidential campaign two years hence. The first was the satisfaction of Ohio with the Coolidge policies. The second was the fact that Senator Willis is a dry, dry alike in public and in private. The third reason was the attitude of the women. While recalling that Willis had voted for woman's suffrage, they resented the success of Pomerene in winning the Democratic senatorial nomination over the woman candidate, Judge Florence Allen. Two years hence the women folks may have learned to be better politicians and better sports; they may have learned to abide by majority rule regardless of the sex of the candidates, but they have not yet advanced so far. Nor, apparently, has Judge Allen. Mrs. Allen is quoted as saying that she could hardly be ready for an associate justice of the Ohio supreme court to take the stump in a political campaign, but it's worth noting that she certainly did none speaking at a snipped chin up a bit, regardless of her judicial position, while she was a candidate for the senatorial nomination.

Mr. Willis was dry, and, despite the attempts of the wet element to accomplish his defeat by bringing into the campaign matters that had no place therein, he was handsomely elected. Governor Donahue, in addition to being a mighty clever politician and having the confidence of a large element of the voters of Ohio, is also a pronounced dry. Mr. Willis and Mr. Donahue were elected. Mr. Pomerene, who was credited with being liberal in his views on prohibition, lost out. But while Ohio is decidedly dry, as dryness goes, Democracy may flinch that all the states of the union are not, and, as we said, the fact that he went down in defeat does not necessarily put him entirely out of the running, although the probabilities are that it will. In the coming presidential campaign, however, he is not necessarily put out for all time. We here in Marion have reason to recall one who suffered a crushing defeat in Ohio and yet later attained a seat in the United States senate and the presidency.

It's worth noting that Senator Jim Reed didn't start musing things up in senatorial circles till after he had decided to quit his job.

What surprises us is that Mr. Mussolini, ever cool and collected, has never thought of telling any of his would-be acolytes to go and get a reputation as a "shoeshine" before experimenting on him.

TWIN BEDS!

Automobile Deaths Mount Steadily.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

An enterprising insurance agent sent me a card the other day. It gave some startling figures about deaths and disabling accidents.

Last year in the United States 25,000 automobile deaths were killed; 17,000 persons died in burning building accidents. In roadway accidents 10,000 were killed. Elevated accidents caused 5,000 fatalities.

When all summed up in these few words, one breath in twelve is due to death. Every five minutes somebody suffers a fatal accident.

In addition to the deaths, 30,000 persons are injured every day, a total of 12,000 injuries in a year.

What are we going to do with the ever increasing number of automobile? Today Day night I drove thirty miles from the city to my farm. It seems we won't 10,000 automobile. There were an about a million deaths for the entire nation.

I regard the automobile, properly used, as a great advance, not alone for the comfort and convenience of the people, but also for their health. It takes them out to the open air. It stimulates a normal appetite. It promotes the appetite and stimulates the health.

With increasing incidents in locomotion, and, be assured, there'll be more, nothing relieves stagnation like the greater factor of danger. This is also true of street accidents, one more common between four and six o'clock in the afternoon than at any other time. The avoidance of near corners and fastened oneself. There must be extra care at this time of day.

We can never know how many sleepers have caused the deaths of their victims. No body should die after he is within a mile and a half ready for bed.

The statement about deaths in burning buildings reminds me of what Chief Keeler of the New York fire department told me once. He said that almost every fire in houses starts in the rubbish of the basement.

You can't have a clean house and a healthy family unless the basement is clean. Some diseases are carried by rats, mice and other vermin. These pests thrive in the dark.

Not only, then, do you increase the fire risk by having a rubbish laden basement, but you increase the danger of disease. Safety demands that clean be kept here.

Many minor injuries result finally by reasons of infection. First aid is an art which should be taught every child. In every home there should be an outfit for first aid to the injured. Proper care immediately after an accident will go far toward the prevention of conditions which might prove fatal.

Every citizen should give thought to accident prevention. In most communities there are occasions when this idea is stressed. We should help in the movement.

"HAIR-GROON"

Keeps Hair Combed, Glossy Well-Groomed all Day

"Hair-Groon" is a definite combing cream which costs only a few cents a jar at any drug store. Millions use it because it gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to the hair — that final touch to good dress both in busfess and on social occasions. Even students, rarely shampooed hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groon" is greaseless, also helps grow thick, lustrous hair. —Adv.
